

THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN
Department of Medical Genetics
Genetics Building
MADISON 6, WIS.

May 7, 1960

Dr. Joshua Lederberg
Department of Genetics
School of Medicine
Stanford University
Palo Alto, California

Dear Josh:

interpreted as being
I too was rather surprised and annoyed at the restrictions placed by the McGraw-Hill Book Company on the television film. However, after some discussion with them and with Herskowitz I signed it anyhow. They said that any previous commitment I had made in connection with the other film was not in direct competition to this. In fact it is not; they are at quite different levels.

You might be interested in knowing that Tracy Sonneborn simply refused to sign the contract, he tells me. Apparently this was deemed satisfactory or else the whole matter was dropped. I'm not sure exactly what he did but perhaps you would like to correspond with him directly. If I had known then what I do now I would have raised objections too, and perhaps the three of us could have made some considerable impact. I too am through with making television appearances. The other film is going to be shown sometime next fall. I have long since lost any interest in it but the mechanical parts of it are still going ahead. It is not likely that I will be going to Los Angeles or anywhere else with this.

We are still not moved into the quarters that you were supposed to move into but still expect to momentarily. Otherwise things are going along very nicely and we are very happy with Ernst Freese. I do want to see both of you very much and I am sure there will be a chance one way or the other soon. Best wishes.

Sincerely,

James F. Crow

JFC/bs